

Animal Disease Traceability

Instructions for Registering a Premises

This information will be kept confidential and will only be accessed by animal health officials for disease trace back and animal health surveillance purposes.

STEP 1 - Account Set Up

You will need: Business name, contact person, mailing address, county, and phone number for your livestock business entity. This address may be different than the location (premises) where the animals are kept or handled. This address can be any officially recognized United States Postal Service address within the United States. The same account may include one or more premises operated by the same business account entity. To ensure the security of your account and premises information, you will need to create a user name and password.

STEP 2 - Premises Registration.

A premises is the primary geographic location where livestock are kept or handled. For non-producer participants this is the location where the livestock related activity occurs. This address may be different than the business account address and must be a 911 or physical address within Georgia (No P O Box). You may register more than one premises per account. Each premises with a distinct location should be registered separately.

Once you have completed your premises registration you will receive your Premises ID. Please make a note of the number or print the confirmation page. You will also receive a confirmation letter from our office in 1-2 weeks.

You may access your account on line using your security user ID and password. Certain information in your account can be modified as the situation surrounding your account and premises may change over time. We recommend that you periodically review and update your information to keep it as current as possible. Since some changes, i.e. active status, sale or transfer of a premises, can only be made by the Georgia Department of Agriculture office, you will need to notify us when these changes occur.
