COPING WITH DISASTER

in the agricultural community

"Devastating would be the main word I would use, but I'd also say we are fortunate and blessed. Even though it's hard to look at it that way."

KNOW WHEN TO GET HELP

While it is normal to feel sad, anxious, or worried after a disaster, some may still feel those heightened emotions a year or more after a disaster. If you or someone you know struggles to cope with strong feelings after a few weeks/months, or experiences continued interference with normal functioning, get help by accessing one of the resources found in the pamphlet.

Contact the National Suicide Prevention Life-line right away if you or someone you know threatens to hurt or kill him or herself or someone else, or talks or writes about death, dying, or suicide.

Common Responses to a Disaster

“My motto has been adapt and overcome through this whole thing.” Sheila Rice, Georgia Farmer after Hurricane Michael

Know How To Relieve Stress

You can manage and alleviate your stress by taking time to take care of yourself.

KEEP THINGS IN PERSPECTIVE

Use credible sources to keep informed about new information and developments, but avoid overexposure to news broadcasts of the event.

BE KNOWLEDGEABLE ABOUT RESOURCES

Learn about what resources are available to aid you and others affected by the tragedy. Seek resources if needed. Contact your local EMA.

CONNECT WITH OTHERS

Talk to friends, family, or colleagues who likely are experiencing the same feelings. Spend time with friends and family.

KEEP YOURSELF HEALTHY

Get adequate rest, eat healthy meals, and drink plenty of water. Avoid excessive amounts of caffeine or alcohol and the use of tobacco or illegal drugs.

SEEK ROUTINE

Maintain a normal family and daily routine, limiting demanding responsibilities on yourself and your family.

USE PRACTICAL WAYS TO RELAX

Use relaxation methods such as breathing exercises, meditation, calming self-talk, or soothing music. Get plenty of exercise.
